1. Open character or text file containing font and add to collection of fonts for usage in text mode.
2. Paste text to text box. Font2Bmp will process the text and generate bitmap representation for each letter. 3. Font2Bmp will generate a.bmp file with the filename of each character. If a font is changed in the collection, Font2Bmp will cache the.bmp files, so that the next time the font is changed, the bitmaps will be reloaded in the cache. This is very useful if you want to make a lot of fonts in a short time. 4. You can save the bitmaps to a folder for later use or publish them to the web. The purpose of Font2Bmp is simple. There are many programs that can print or convert fonts, but most only do character-by-character conversion. Font2Bmp runs in character mode but can also read from a text file to build a bitmap image. You can then select this image and it will be saved with a filename of its ascii value. It will also be converted to a GIF format image file which can be read by most graphics applications (including Photoshop, Paint, etc). This program works with nearly all font type files, including TrueType (.ttf), Open Type (.otf), and PostScript (.ps) fonts. The program will not work with fonts that contain multiple fonts within a single file. For example, if you have a program such as MS TrueType 2 Advanced Font Converter, then it will not work with Font2Bmp, since this program only can make one font image from a font file. The program will also work with new system fonts such as the 'Embed Vista' fonts. The Embed Vista fonts can be found in C:\Windows\Fonts\Embed Vista. If you would like to save a whole font at once, the program will export it as a PostScript font or a PDF file, allowing you to also create a TrueType (.ttf) file. Font2Bmp Features: Some of

For example, if you wish to use the 'Courier' font, you should install the font in your system and then generate a text string.bmp file with each character of the font. There is also a 'Character mode' from which the user can select which font they wish to use and a 'Text String' from which the user can create a character string for use with a bitmap tool such as 'AlienBMP' which will create bitmap files for use with the print / tv / film industry.
