South Korean movie review site from the BFK Boloton Peninsul cinema, on the island of Boloto Peninsular. After more than 30 days on the road, I'm heading to a locality near the Burmese border, with only one day left on my way to Bhutan. There is another easy way that I have taken to transfer the film in Bhutan - the social network "Myanmar Bolota Peninsur." I haven't been to a Bhutanese Buddhist monastery yet, but once I get access to them I plan to visit them and write a short review. Here's what I came across while getting there. My trip to Buton has served as a pretty good source of travel information for the Bhutan region. I work in the "Myatnhana" office of the Ministry of Tourism of Bhutan and I would like to mention that I was planning to go to the northern border of Bhutan in Nara, but they asked me to come to them, and when I arrived in Anonbai, I got to the pass, which only at first glance looks impressive. I had to cross it, and during the crossing, which took about 6-7 hours, I began to worry that the car might stop, but thanks to numerous turns, some of which lead to swamps and difficult sections to pass, I continued to approach point. While I'm trying to find a good lunch spot, I notice something out of the ordinary due to a bush growing on high rocks. I mean, they grew on a very high rock, and looked like some kind of elephant grape. Later I learned that this plant is called "Ugon Bramaraum". I was amazed when I saw the first rice crop that was harvested last year.And as adventurous as it is in tropical areas, in Yunnayan, considered "the pioneer of rice in the world," the harvest was remarkably calm. In fact, even now, after more than
