1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a flow-rate controller for controlling the amount of fluid supplied to an external device, and in particular to a flow-rate controller with a resistive element for controlling the amount of fluid. 2. Description of the Related Art A flow-rate controller comprises a resistive element for passing a current, a variable resistor (variable resistor element) that is connected to the resistive element and adjusts the resistance value of the resistive element, and a feedback circuit for monitoring the output of the resistive element and applying feedback to the variable resistor element to maintain constant the output of the resistive element. In the resistive element, a variable resistor (variable resistor element) that is connected to the resistive element and adjusts the resistance value of the resistive element, and a feedback circuit for monitoring the output of the resistive element and applying feedback to the variable resistor element to maintain constant the output of the resistive element are provided as basic components. The feedback circuit comprises a constant current circuit that supplies a constant current to the resistive element and a voltage amplifier that amplifies the difference in voltage between the output of the resistive element and a reference voltage. FIG. 9 shows a flow-rate controller disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2009-253324 as a conventional flow-rate controller. In this flow-rate controller, a fixed-value current circuit that supplies a constant current to a resistive element and a feedback circuit that compares the output voltage of the resistive element and a reference voltage to provide feedback are provided as basic components. In this conventional flow-rate controller, a constant current source that supplies a fixed-value current to a resistive element is provided as a fixed-value current circuit. The constant current supply circuit is structured using an operational amplifier. Therefore, a current flows into a resistive element via the emitter of a PNP transistor whose base is connected to the output of the operational amplifier and the collector of the transistor is grounded via a diode. The current has a fixed value of I (mA) as a function of the emitter voltage V_{be} (V) of the PNP transistor. A fixed-value current circuit that supplies a constant current to a resistive element is constituted as described above, thus providing a flow-rate controller that can be inexpensively manufactured. In the conventional flow-rate controller, however, a large current flows through the PNP transistor

The South African National Roads Agency Limited (Sanral), which operates a fleet of approximately 20,000 road vehicles, ensures that all items have survived the natural elements. All vehicles undergo a thorough body and cargo inspection prior to being assigned to a pool for use. Crane-mounted inspection system installed to ensure that all vehicles receive a check for corrosion and dents. SANRAL has also invested in a new tow truck fleet and a specially designed crane, which allows for the inspection of all road vehicles, from vans, to vehicles with an engine greater than 1.6litres. "There are no longer any limitations to access to treatment for road vehicles," says SANRAL managing director, Msume Ramadhani. "The road vehicle pools are a significant contributor to safety and the reduction of vehicle downtime."Free Exercise And Free Speech A while ago I posted a video clip of 'Blind Donna' making a speech advocating free exercise of religion. This was posted on the YouTube page of Radio Jan San Vicente. Now Radio Jan S.V. is reporting that the Minister of Communications, currently Mr. Rogers, has issued a directive banning the organization from airing any speech advocating free exercise of religion. The Executive Secretary of Radio Jan S.V., when asked about the ban, replied: "That is indeed what the minister just told me." Furthermore, the Minister of Communications, currently Mr. Rogers, has defended his ban. "I have been in this position for about three months and I have heard countless complaints on the issue of the airing of this speech." Said Mr. Rogers. "Their organization is banned from airing the speech because if they aired it, it would set a precedent which would threaten other organizations who have made the very same speech." The time for free speech in South Africa has long gone. The ruling party is censoring those with whom it disagrees. "How can any self-respecting media company, be forced to present a speech which supports the ruling party's cause – the banning of two words or phrases." Said Mr. Rogers. "Even a large media company would be financially crippled." I think that you are correct that "the time for free speech in South Africa has long gone", but I would add two words to your sentence: "(1
