The nGOD was incorporated in Eudragit® (S-100) based copolymer nanoparticles (NP) or into polymeric poly(lactic-co-glycolic acid) (PLGA) implants. The particles were characterized by scanning electron microscopy (SEM), light microscopy and photon correlation spectroscopy (PCS). Pseudo-periodic acid-Schiff staining was performed to assess the amount of nGOD associated with the cells. The rheological properties of the suspensions were studied using a cone-plate rheometer. The stability and in vitro enzymatic activity of nGOD were determined. The particles were spherical in shape with size ranged from 345 to 380 nm. nGOD was associated with the particles in a distribution of 23-40%. The particles were stable for at least one month, and exhibited excellent storage properties. nGOD was more stable and less immunogenic compared to the native GOD, and could be stored and formulated for subcutaneous administration in a simple, economical way. Moreover, no significant loss of enzymatic activity was observed for both, nGOD-based formulations. The nGOD-NP suspension was suitable for subcutaneous administration. The nGOD-PLGA implants did not degrade over one month. The rate of enzymatic reaction and the stability of the enzyme were comparable to the native GOD. The nGOD exhibited excellent physicochemical and biological properties, indicating that it may be used as a potential carrier for subcutaneous administration of GOD. The court heard how Mr Ames and Ms Sharp first met in prison. He was serving a sentence in Hagen Lane.

The software is designed to help architects integrate theÂ .Q: Convert an int to a float in C, preserving fractional part I'm trying to convert the following int int a = 123456789; to the float float b = 123456789.0; I have tried the following: float c = a * 1.0; Which converts the number. float c = a / 1.0; Which loses the fractional part. float c = a / 1.0f; Which throws a divide by zero float c = a / 1e3f; Which also throws a divide by zero. float c = a / (int)a; This works but it's not an answer, it's a suggestion for using long long. Should I be doing a special cast? Is there a way to convert the int in a way that preserves the fractional part? A: You need to cast it to float first: float c = (float) a / 1.0f; A: You could also use std::round(a / 1.0f) to get 123456789.0 in one line. float c = (float)round(a / 1.0f); A: You can use std::round(a / 1.0f) to get 123456789.0 in one line. Q: Why are people not afraid of other Christians? The reason I'm asking is that recently I'm more and more aware of the fact that I might be doing things in the wrong way. This is mostly because of Christian friends of mine and the whole church hierarchy. I have my doubts that I'm doing things the "right way" or "incorrectly". One friend of mine said: "You are not afraid of yourself, you should be afraid of yourself". This seemed to me that he was insulting me, but he never explained himself to me. I am sure other people think the same way. Why are Christians not afraid of each other? A: I think there are two main reasons people are not afraid of other Christians: a general lack of fear because Christians, by and large, have a different view of reality than others in our culture

ArchiCADÂ .1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a disc cartridge of the type generally called a "jewel box" or "Jewel Box" which is used for storing a disc-like recording medium such as an optical disc (e.g. Compact Disc, etc.) or an optical magnetic disc (e.g. MO), and more specifically to a disc cartridge which is used for storing an optical disc such as a CD which is generally used for optical recording or reproducing of music and visual information or data of a computer or the like. 2. Related Background Art An example of a disc cartridge of the above described type is described in, for example, Japanese Patent Publication No. 56-63094. This example uses a conventional optical disc adapted for magneto-optical recording and reproduction such as a "MO cartridge" which is adapted to be loaded in an optical disc drive unit to be rotated and to be magnetically recorded/reproduced. This type of disc cartridge is characterized by having a rectangular cartridge case which contains a disc-like recording medium in a space defined therein and which is brought into a closed state by closing a lid for opening and closing a case main body. Such a cartridge case is formed with a diameter-increased space in an outer periphery of the case main body for containing the disc-like recording medium which has a
